Day 6 – Amsterdam to Innsbruck

Hello everybody and Happy New Year!! So, yesterday was mainly a travel day for the team. We woke up and started our day in Amsterdam in really nice hotel rooms (thank God) and flew out to Munich. We were welcomed by the rainy and foggy weather as we landed mid-afternoon. We then took a coach bus for two hours, with a stop at nutritious McDonalds, and soon found ourselves in Innsbruck, Austria. We're staying in a cute spot called the "Charlotte".

As the night continued on, we were gathered in the dining hall to start a pretty epic game of Trivia. It got pretty intense as the game got closer, and unfortunately Lauren and I took a tough loss and got second in a very tight race to win.

We then went on a little walk with Curt that then turned into an expedition to Downtown Innsbruck. It was a little crazy with all of the New Year's festivities, but the lights, music, and the fun people that were around us made it all worth it. There were even some live concerts that we got to stop by and show off some pretty great dance moves. After spending a few hours in the square, and many, many pictures later, we took a taxi back to the hotel to celebrate ringing in the New Year together. As the clock struck midnight, we all cheered, watched some fireworks, and then split up into our rooms and hung out the rest of the night.

Thank you for reading our little update!!
Respectfully yours,
Abby Moe and Lauren Galvy ☺
